THE REPUBLICAN.

Established 1869. BELLEFONTE, PA., THURSDAY, MAY 19, 1910. Vol. 40. No. 26.

ENTRIES ARE CLOSED FOR PRIMARIES JUNE 4

Party Lines Being Shaped for Selection of Candidates.

GRAMLEY WITHDRAWS

Announces He Will Not be on Ticket for Legislature---All Indications Are That Patton Will be Nominated for Congress Over Emery.

With the near approach of the primaries in Centre County party lines are shaping themselves and all indications are that the Republicans will nominate a strong, winning ticket. Owing to the withdrawal of C. L. Gramley, of Rebersburg, the Republicans enter the primaries with no candidate for the House, at Harrisburg. A petition had been presented entering Mr. Gramley for this nomination, but he filed a formal withdrawal and his name, therefore, will not appear on the primary ballot.

The only contest attracting any attention is that between Charles E. Patton, of Curwensville, and Lewis Emery. Jr., of Bradford, for the Republican nomination for Congress. The primaries will afford the Republicans of Centre County an opportunity to say whether they prefer Mr. Patton, a Republican who is all Republican, or Mr. Emery, who is Republican now and then and a Democrat the rest of the time. On such an issue, there should be no doubt, and we are glad to say that to all appearances there is no doubt, of the result.

Every Democratic newspaper in the Twenty-first Congressional district is booming Emery for the Republican nomination. Let every Republican, before he goes to the polls, stop and ask himself why this is so. If these Democratic newspapers had any honest regard for Emery would they not be advocating his nomination on the Democratic ticket, where he rightly belongs? Instead of this, the Democratic orga s are working for W. C. Heinle for nomination for Congress on the Democratic ticket and for Emery on the Republican ticket. In other words, the Democrats want to dictate both the Republican and Democratic nominations.

Mr. Emery was the Democratic candidate for Governor four years ago. He openly fought that sterling Republican, Edwin S. Stuart, who, fortunately for this State, was triumphantly elected on the Republican ticket. The Republicans of Centre County four years ago, and by a decisive majority, declared that they were unwilling to trust Emery and that they could trust Governor Stuart. Having deserted the Republican party and cast his fortunes with the Democratic party, and there having failed to secure a political office, Mr. Emery now asks that he be rewarded by Republicans. Rewarded for what? Who deserve rewards? The man who is faithful? or the one who deserts in the hour of battle?

Mr. Patton is a Republican of the type of Edwin S. Stuart. He is clean, honest, above reproach. He comes of that distinguished family of Pattons, all Republicans and all men tried and true. Mr. Patton is too good a Republican to be favored by Democrats, but is this not all the more reason why he should receive the solid support of Republicans from one end of the county to the other? When a Republican is in demand because of something about him that appeals strongly to the Democratic bosses is it not time that his Republicanism were looked into? The situation in a nutshell is simply this: If the Republicans of Centre County want to send to Congress a man who may be relied upon to stand by Republican policies, stand by President Taft and his administration, they will nominate Mr. Patton. If they want to send to Congress a man who travels in a circle, who trades with the Democrats when it suits his fancy and who is politically homeless, then let them nominate Mr. Emery.

We are firm in our belief that the Republicans of this county are too strong in their party loyalty, too strong in their contempt for party treachery, to nominate Mr. Emery. We believe that they will demonstrate this by giving to Mr. Patton such an indorsement as will teach Mr. Emery that he cannot bitterly fight them one year and then blandly demand their support because he thinks he has a better chance to win on the Republican ticket than on the Democratic ticket.

For State Senator, there are three Republican candidates in the field for the nomination. Centre County presents a candidate for this honor in Philip E. Womelsdorff, of Philipsburg. Mr. Womelsdorff is an active Republican and

OH, YOU COMET

Kept So Many Persons Up Last Night Trying to See Your Tail.

Having passed through the comet's tail, last night, how did you enjoy it? Or didn't you enjoy it? Or didn't you know anything about it?

Were you one of the many hundreds of persons in this section who were up the greater part of the night, looking in vain for the terrible collision that some said would come, or for the wonderful electrical display that others were just as sure would light up the heavens? If so, you are easily to be picked out in the crowd of persons in the streets. For the comet seekers are yawning their heads off and feeling pretty much like throwing a brick at each person who asks:

"Well, did you see the comet?"

Getting down to that part of the earth which feels and looks just the same today as before last night's experience, the terrible collision did not occur, nor was there to be witnessed anything like a wonderful electrical display. Several hundred persons traveled up Quaker Hill, waited until their patience was exhausted, and then traveled down again. Scores of others were on Curtin Street, on Half Moon Hill and a few of the more astronomically inclined journied to the top of Point McCoy. The excursions started anywhere from 7 P. M. to 2 A. M., but one time was just about as good as another. It was a cc.tless sky.

If there was any collision between the earth and the comet's tail, and if there was any electrical display, it was at probably 10.30 o'clock, at which hour quite a n.. ber of persons saw, a falling ball of fire, or a falling star, followed by a shower of smaller stars.

Be that as it may, as old Aunt Mary Jane used to say, tickets of admission to the comet show, which last night were in strong demand, couldn't be given away free today.

Has it Occurred to You—

That the Centre Democrat wants Emery nominated for Congress on the Republican ticket?

That the Democratic Watchman wants Emery nominated for Congress on the Republican ticket?

That the Centre Hall Reporter wants Emery nominated for Congress on the Republican ticket?

That the Philadelphia Record wants Emery nominated for Congress on the Republican ticket?

All four Democratic newspapers are boosting Emery, not for the Democratic but for the Republican nomination.

Why?

It doesn't take a magnifying glass to find the colored gentleman in this woodpile.

Had Thrilling Runaway.

CAPT. BENNISON DEAD; TWO FRIENDS STRICKEN

Brave Soldier and Sterling Republican Dies After Long Illness.

FINE MILITARY RECORD

John Holmes, Also of Howard, Dies Few Hours After Leaving Capt. Bennison's Bedside James McCalmont, of State College, Has Stroke.

Samuel H. Bennison, one of Howard's most highly esteemed residents and well known throughout Centre and Clinton counties, died at his home in that place about three o'clock Sunday afternoon. He had been ill for several years with hydrocele and for a greater part of the time was confined to his room.

Within a few hours after Captain Bennison's death two life-long friends were stricken, one fatally. John Holmes, of Howard, who was with Captain Bennison when the latter expired, died suddeuly on Monday, about one o'clock, and at about 11 o'clock, on Tuesday, James McCalmont, of State College, was stricken with paralysis. Captain Bennison, Mr. Holmes and Mr. McCalmont were neighboring farmers near Jacksonville for many years. The friendship there cemented lasted through life. It is a rather strange coincidence that within a few hours two of the three old friends should die and the third be stricken with paralysis.

While the death of Captain Bennison was not unexpected it has cast a gloom over the community and his passing away is mourned by a large number of admiring friends. Surviving him are his wife, who was Margaret McDowell, a daughter of Perry McDowell, and the following children: Perry McD. Bennison, of Pittsburg; Jennie, wife of G. R. Worrick, of Mackeyville; Robert H. Bennison, of Nittany; Guy C. and Dean Bennison, of Burlington, Washington; Bertha, wife of John S. Holter, of Johnsonburg; Emma, wife of H. M. McClintic, of Atlantic City; Nelle, wife of W. J. Torrence, of Oklahoma, and Helen at home. The following brothers and sisters also survive: Jane and Mary Bennison, of Howard, Mrs. Sarah B. Sweeney, of Pittsburg; Mrs. W. R. Gardner, of Howard, and George C. Bennison, of DuBois.

Samuel H. Bennison was born at Bellefonte, March 5, 1844. The family moved to Mill Hall, April 1, 1845. In 1857 the family removed to a farm in Porter township, Nittany Valley, Clinton county. Here Samuel worked on the farm with his father until 1862. On February 10, of that year, he enlisted in Company H, 56th Regiment, Pennsyl-

ETTERS NOT GUILTY OF FIRING TIMBER LANDS

Snow Shoe Men Acquitted By Jury of Serious Charge.

OLEO CASE IS IGNORED

Grand Jury Ends Suit Brought Against Merchant Brouse---Judge Orvis Postpones Second Week of Court---Many Cases are Heard.

The attempt to convict Reuben and Ralph Etters, of Clarence, on the charge of firing timber on the lands of the Spruce Creek Hunting & Fishing Club, in Burnside township, failed dismally, the jury in court yesterday returning a verdict of not guilty and directing that the county pay the costs. The fact that Mr. Etters and his son had been arrested and held for court on the charge was published exclusively last week in "The Republican." At that time we pointed out that both men bore splendid reputations and that their friends were confident of an acquittal once the case should come to trial.

The Spruce Creek Hunting & Fishing Club is an organization of Philadelphia sportsmen. They own thousands of acres of land in Burnside township and residents of Snow Shoe and all that section of the county are strictly prohibited from fishing and hunting on the property. Every case of trespassing has been vigorously prosecuted. When the more serious charge of burning timber was filed against Mr. Etters and his son, it was the belief of their friends that spitework was behind the matter. For this reason yesterday's verdict occasioned no surprise.

Another charge to fall flat was that against R. S. Brouse, the merchant, of violating the olemargarine laws. It was alleged by a State inspector that the oleo in question had been colored to resemble butter. Mr. Brouse contended that the color was that of the natural ingredients. The jury ignored the bill and directed that the county pay the costs.

Judge Orvis announced that he had declared off the second week of court and directed Sheriff Hurley not to summon the jurors announced for next week.

The jury late yesterday returned a verdict of not guilty, and the prosecutor to pay the costs, in the case of Com. vs. John Walker, charged with larceny of a pair of shoes owned by T. B. Budinger, the Snow Shoe merchant.

Court convened on Monday morning at ten o'clock. The grand jury was called, sworn and George M. Harter, farmer, of Marion Township, selected as foreman.

J. Thomas Mitchell was appointed a member of the Law Library Committee,

CAPTAIN SAMUEL H. BENNISON.

MAN AND WOMAN IN LOCKUP

Arrested and Sentenced to Five Days for Drunkenness.

The disgraceful spectacle of a man and woman reeling about the streets of Bellefonte, intoxicated, was witnessed on Saturday afternoon, their spree culminating in their arrest by Policemen Dukeman and Daly, and a sentence to a $5 fine, each, or five days in the lockup. Neither the man nor the woman had the nececsary $5, and both were ordered to remain in the lockup for five days. During most of the time of their imprisonment they lived on sandwiches and water, served by the police. They remained locked up until Wednesday when they succeeded in raising sufficient money to be released.

The man gave his name as Jones and said that he hailed from near Waddle station. He said that the woman with him was his wife although by Policemant Daley it was stated that Jones was no her husband. The man and woman came to town on Saturday morning and soon began to load up with liquor. By noon both were in a hilarious condition and were creating a scene on the street near the Pennsylvania Railroad station. Policemen Dukemen and Daly finally appeared and placed the pair under the arrest. Chief Dukeman took charge of the man and Policeman Daly assumed charge of the woman and then all four started for the lockup. On Sunday morning J. C. Harper, president of Council, in the absence of Burgess Bower, who is ill, held a hearing at the lockup and imposed sentence. Both Jones and the woman are about 30 years old. By Monday the woman appeared to keenly appreciate her shame and to Policeman Daly said that her experience was enough to cure her for all time to come

TO FREE MRS. YEARICK

Chemists Report Finding No Arsenic in Husband's Stomach.

District Attorney Hall, of Clinton county, has been advised that the chemical analysis of Harry Yearick's stomach failed to show evidence of arsenic and Mrs. Yearick, who has been in the Lock Haven jail since her husband's funeral, will therefore be discharged.

It will be recalled that Yearick died about two weeks ago at the home of his brother John Yearick, at Hecla. Mrs. Yearick was subsequently arrested, Dr. Fisher, the attending physician, suspecting that the man had died from arsenical-poisoning. The chemical analysis of Yearick's stomach fully exonerates Mrs. Yearick, against whom there was no evidence.

MILESBURG IS JOYOUS OVER NEW BALL PARK

Public Spirited Citizens Raise the Necessary Funds.

TO HOLD BIG FESTIVAL

Gala Event Planned for Saturday Night to Help Defray Cost of Repairs to Field---Amusements and a Good Time Assured for All.

For baseball spirit of the kind that gives a mere handful of citizens the courage to go down into their pockets, finance a project to build a modern, up-to-date field in order that their town might have a first class team, we recommend you to Milesburg. That pretty, hustling town has the baseball fever and furthermore it is going to have baseball. Some towns have the fever, and let it go at that. Other towns try to maintain a baseball team, minus baseball sentiment to cheer it on. Milesburg has both the fever and the determination to step into the front rank with a series of baseball games that will be the envy of Bellefonte and other larger towns in the county.

For years and years Milesburg has been a good baseball town, although the field on which the games were played was anything but modern or well adapted for that sport. This summer, however, things will be different. In a few weeks probably by June 1—the new field will be in readiness for the opening game and then outsiders will be afforded an opportunity to see what a few men, plus a large amount of public spirit, can accomplish and in a remarkably short time.

Right off the bat, let us tell you that on Saturday evening, May 21, all Milesburg is planning to turn out for a grand festival. If you are in the neighborhood, or even miles away, make it a point to attend. If you are a baseball "fan" [illegible] festival is [illegible]'s plan for raising money to reimburse the public spirited citizens who generously advanced the funds necessary to remodel the baseball field and make it a credit to that community. There will be interesting races, cake-walks, etc., to say nothing of an endless menu of good things to eat, so that an evening of rare amusement and sport and a good time in general is assured for all who attend.

To Oscar E. Miles, one of Milesburg's progressive business men, is due the credit for starting the ball a-rolling and for giving the project so much of his time and attention. At his side there have been six others who have worked, loyally and enthusiastically, to win success. Every man and boy in Milesburg is interested and feels that he has a personal part in the work now nearing completion, and all deserve recognition for what they have done. About two months ago the Milesburg Athletic Association took off its figurative coat and started out to secure a modern baseball field. Money was necessary. The members of the association gave their note, personally guaranteed a loan, and thus the money was made available. James McCullough is chairman of the association. Oscar Miles is treasurer, and Toner A. Hugg is secretary. F. L. Wetzler, H. J. Kohlbecker, Edward Quick and Ross Wallace are the other members. Meetings were held, plans discussed and finally the word was given to start work on the new field. From that day to this the work has never lagged and in a few short weeks the field will be completed.

Some idea of the magnitude of the project may be had when it is explained that to put the field in the shape desired it was necessary to haul hundreds of wagon loads of ashes to fill some places and cut out to a depth of three and four feet at other points. Special attention was devoted to building the diamond and now it is in readiness for the finishing touches which will be applied by means of a huge steam roller. The outfield, too, has been levelled and brought into harmony with the floor-like surface of the diamond.

Some idea of the cost may be had from the statement by a member of the association that the total amount to be expended would represent a basis of about fifty cents per capita for every resident of Milesburg borough. A part of this has been met by popular subscription. Considerable is yet to be raised. Now that the field is about ready, attention will be given to organizing a team. Here again the proper spirit is to be displayed. Every fellow who plays baseball will be invited to get out and show himself, and the nine will be made up of the best men available.

Meanwhile, keep your eye on the ball and help Milesburg along by attending Saturday evening's festival. Take our word for it—it will be worth while.

SWISS WOOD-CARVING

The Decline of an Old Industry in the Alpine Republic.

Consul General Mansfield, of Zurich, writing of the gradual decline which the wood-carving industry of the Swiss Oberland has experienced in recent times, says:

"Wood carving, for centuries an important national industry in Switzerland has suffered a crisis during the last year which threatens to affect the business permanently, following upon practically a monopoly and a long period of prosperity. These carvings have been especially popular with tourists, hundreds of thousands of whom visit Switzerland every year, and a large export business has been established with other countries, including the United States. This is especially true as to church emblems and articles representing historic scenes and events.

"An important Swiss wood-carving centre is at Einsieden, a historic village in the mountains in the canton of Schwyz, where there is a celebrated pilgrimage, a wealthy Benedictine monastery and a splendid church. The industry centers in the Bernese Oberland, where wood-carving is the chief occupation. The church emblems of Einsieden, the bears of Berne, the lion of Lucerne, the St. Bernard dogs, cows and the quaint Swiss chalets are all reproduced in wood and sold at the curio shops. These objects have found their way into practically all Continental towns, and Swiss wood carvings are almost as well known in other European countries as at home.

"Various circumstances have contributed to the present crisis, among which is the increased cost of raw material, much of which is imported, making it necessary to advance selling prices without increasing real values. This has invited competition from other countries, especially Austria and Germany. Furthermore, Austria recently placed a heavy import duty on souvenirs, under which wood carvings are classified, and in France they must be stamped 'imported,' which, it is alleged, has affected the sale to such an extent that the imports from Switzerland have been greatly reduced.

"The passing of the Swiss wood-carving industry is further evidence that industrial progress is gradually eliminating from the commercial world rural industries built up and maintained where wages are small and the expense of living low. Modern machinery and methods, increasing competition and the inexorable laws of trade are driving out primitive concerns, or forcing them into combinations. This is cause for regret, [illegible] Bernese Oberland have for generations depended upon wood-carving for maintenance. They have acquired great skill in this, and, being slow to accept innovations, it will be difficult for them to adopt now methods."

Frederick S. Church and the Frog.

"They used to tell," says the Woman's Home Companion "among the fellows in the studio, a story about Frederick S. Church which, if it is not true, is at least characteristic of the whole-heartedness of the man, who is a big specimen of humanity, generous, tender as a woman, yet in nowise lacking in all that constitutes manliness. It seems, so runs the tale, that he had occasion once to draw and paint a frog and, to secure a model, he went down to Staten Island where he beat about the ponds until he had lured the green chap into his basket. He took him up to his studio, put him on a table and bent his energies to making a picture of him. Perhaps it was the strangeness of his surroundings, possibly he had an attack of homesickness, maybe he missed his kind, but whatever the reason, day by day, though Mr. Church tried him with flies and had a generous supply of water, the frog moped and looked sad-eyed at the artist. The pathetic look grew day by day, the jaw quivered and Mr. Froggie's general woebegoneness began to get on the nerves of Mr. Church.

"Finally the artist could stand it no longer and carefully replacing the frog in the basket he journey all the way back to Staten Island where he carefully replaced the unfortunate amphibian in the very pond from which he had first enticed him. Then only was his conscience easy; then only could he hold up his head once more and feel that all was well in the world. The history stops just here and reports from the frog are lacking. Let us hope that he, too, was pleased and appreciated Mr. Church's solicitude and thoughtfulness."

Inexpensive Caps for Maids.

Four pretty maids' caps may be made from a five-cent box of "tourists' ruching." Four or five rows of the ruching sewed upon an oblong foundation of thin muslin make as neat and dressy a little band as one could desire. It takes about two minutes to make one. They will not wash, but will stay white and fresh a long time, and the cost is so extremely slight that it hardly matters.—Woman's Home Companion.

Opportunities at West Point.

The course of instruction in the United States Military Academy at West Point, provides an education of which any young man may feel proud. Few schools in the world occupy sites which compare with it in beauty, while the buildings, equipment and historical associations stimulate enthusiasm and ambition. The training of body and mind are both of the highest order. The young graduate from West Point commands attention and respect not enjoyed by those emerging from colleges and universities. His services are in demand, for he is known to be strong physically and has been taught how to do things, and do them promptly.

It is, therefore, surprising that the West Point classes are below their full quota. Not so many years ago scores of bright, ambitious boys were bending every energy to secure an appointment, and the few successful once were the envy of hundreds. Evidently the difficulty of securing the scholarship has in these days been overestimated, or there would not be the long waiting list of a few years ago. Each state is entitled to but two scholarships each year, to which are added forty from the country at large. Appointment is by the President, usually upon recommendation of a senator or representative.

At the present time there are ninety-four vacancies which cannot be filled under the present law. These vacancies are due partly to some state having failed to furnish their quota this year and partly to students who have dropped out for one reason or another. Colonel Scott, superintendent of the academy, has recommended to the House Committee, which is considering a bill to change present conditions of admission, that where an appointee fails to enter, the man standing second in the same examination for entrance be appointed to the vacancy thus caused. The recommendation is excellent and should be adopted.

The number of graduated cadets for eleven years past has averaged 45 per year short of the number required to fill ordinary vacancies and 172 short of the number required to fill all vacancies. During the past eight years $7,500,000 has been appropriated for additional buildings and improvements at West Point, but without providing legislation for a larger number of students. Hence, the new barracks with a capacity of 312 cadets is occupied by only 51 cadets. Major General Bell has formulated a plan whereby the number of graduates may be increased 25 per cent at an additional expenditure of only 1 per cent.

A four years' course of such training as our Government provides at West Point where not only all expenses are paid but the student is actually paid money for his attendance, surely offers attractions which, if once known, must appeal to hundreds of our young men, and awake old-time interest and desire to work for and secure an appointment.—H. H. Windsor in the June Popular Mechanics.

Bellefonte Has to Bow to the Inevitable —Scores of Citizens Prove It.

After reading the public statement of this representative citizen of Bellefonte given below, you must come to this conclusion: A remedy which has kept the kidneys in good health since, can be relied upon to perform the same work in other cases. Read this:

William McClellan, 244 E. Lamb St., Bellefonte, Pa., says:" Doan's Kidney Pills fixed me up in good shape and consequently I think highly of them. I suffered for a long time from a pain and lameness across my back and some mornings I could hardly get out of bed. My back ached constantly and the kidney secretions were irregular in passage. Hearing a great deal about Doan's Kidney Pills, I decided to give them a trial and procured a supply from Green's Pharmacy Co. They cured me and I am enjoying good health. My advice to anyone afflicted with kidney complaint is to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial." (Statement given Oct. 21, 1907.) Re-Endorsement. Mr. McClellan was interviewed on Nov. 23 1909 and he said: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills once or twice during the past two years, while suffering from backache and they have given me prompt relief. You are welcome to publish my testimonial at any time you desire."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agent for the United States.

The Indians' Capacity.

The educated Indian girl looks for a higher type of manhood in a husband than satisfied her mother. If she does not find her ideal, she is perfectly capable of earning her own living. You may find in her any one of various traits that fit her for special work. She makes a superb nurse. Hospitals which have trained Indian girls are making a constant effort to enlist others of the race. She has infinite patience, forbearance, generally a magnificent physique and no trace of the "nerves" which so often cause a breakdown among overcivilized races. An Indian girl can go through the most trying surgical case with a stoical calm that is extraordinary. She never gets flurried, anxious or worried, and she obeys the physician as a soldier does his commander. In caring for cases of severe illness she seems to live on some strange reserve force and is a tender as well as a painstaking nurse.

Indian girls make splendid needlewoman. They inherit the skill their grandmothers put into bead work or basket making. They have excellent taste and an intuitive idea of good coloring. You find among them good musicians; they excel as teachers of their own people and many have achieved a high place as workers in the arts and crafts. As often as possible art is taught in the schools by an Indian woman, with a high regard for all that is best in native handiwork.—Estella Reel, in Good Housekeeping.

What Everbody Wants.

Foley's Kidney Remedy should be taken at the first indication of any irregularity, and a serious illness may be averted. Foley's Kidney Remedy will restore your kidneys and bladder to their normal state and activity. Sold by C. M. Parrish

Coloring Moving Picture Films.

Realizing that a properly colored moving picture film is far in advance of the uncolored film, a great French film concern has devised means by which the tinting can be done successfully.

"The coloring machines," says the June Popular Mechanics, "are ingenious affairs provided with a number of stencil strips as long as the strip of picture film. Holes cut in the stencil strips correspond to the parts of each of the little pictures which are to receive the coloring of ink or dye each strip is expected to give the film. The stencil strips are run through the machine on top of the picture film, one at a time, until all the colors have been put on. The stencil strip and film strip, of course, run through the machine as if one solid layer. The coloring matter is put on the film by a short endless band of velvet, which acts as an ink brush, the soft brushlike surface passing through the holes of the stencil strip and touching the surface of the film.

"After the films colored by the machine are retouched by hand the result is so nearly identical with the best of natural color photography that the average observer cannot distinguish the difference."

HIS REVENGE.

A Man Was First Ruined, Then Made Rich In a Peculiar Way.

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

John Emsley and Peter Fogg were two young men in the wool business in London. Emsley was a fine, open hearted man, who preferred to do business on generous principles, while Fogg was a shaver.

Emsley, being of a speculative turn of mind, took risks, lost and got himself involved financially. He had done his partner many favors. Indeed, Fogg was indebted to him for all he was. Emsley therefore looked to Fogg to help him out. He owed Fogg a thousand pounds, but looked to him not only to give him time on the amount, but lend him money to tide him over with his other creditors. Fogg not only declined to lend, but forced Emsley into bankruptcy on his own claim. A week after Emsley had been ruined there was a change in the wool market that would have made him rich.

Emsley went to Australia, where he endeavored to recoup, but luck was against him, and nothing that he touched brought him money. He sank lower and lower in worldly goods till at last, being discouraged and having a fancy for the water, he turned fisherman.

He never forgot Fogg's ingratitude, constantly brooding over the many substantial favors he had done Fogg and the fact that when the turning point of his own life came and a little assistance was needed the man he had made unmade him. He lived in a cabin by himself on one of the points that inclose Sydney harbor. He would be out all day on the water and while waiting for fish to take his hook would think how delightful it would be could he be revenged on Fogg—not that he ever seriously considered such revenge as possible; it was a sort of monomania with him.

One night after going to sleep, his mind given over to these desires for revenge, he dreamed that he was out on the bay and was pulling in a large fish. He had much trouble landing it, but when he did so and cut it open he found within its belly an enormous diamond. He was familiar with the size of the famous diamonds of the world and knew that this one of his dream was worth a great fortune.

"I will sell it," he said, "go to London and use it to revenge myself on Fogg."

He awoke with the disappointment usual to persons who have had delightful dreams that have turned out to be dreams only. Going out on the water as usual during the day, a shark swallowed the bait on one of his lines. He killed the shark and was about to cut his line that the fish might drift away when he remembered his dream. Yielding to an impulse, he towed the shark ashore and cut him open. In his stomach he found a London newspaper. Taking it into his cabin, he dried it and that night before going to bed opened its sheets to read the news from home. On the first page he saw in large letters the words:

"War declared between France and Germany."

There was then no cable to Australia, and this shark had brought the news faster than the steamer carrying the mail that would doubtless soon arrive. Where had the shark swallowed the paper? That the shark itself only knew. Possibly it had been thrown overboard from a ship that had received it at a port where it had been sent by rail.

It did not require a long time for Emsley to see in this news that he alone possessed the diamond of his dream. When the next steamer arrived with it the price of wool would take an enormous jump. Emsley went to a wealthy wool dealer whom he knew and told him the story of the shark, withholding the news found in the paper, but asserting its importance.

"When the next steamer arrives," he said, "the price of wool will undergo an important change for the better or worse. Agree to buy or sell as I direct and pay me 75 per cent of your profits and I will produce my newspaper." The merchant stood for better terms, but Emsley threatened to take the matter to another, and an attorney was called in who wrote a contract between the two men. Then Emsley produced his paper, and the merchant bought up the season's clip, averaging 9 pence per pound. The very next day a steamer arrived with the news of war between France and Germany. Wool jumped in price and continued to rise till it reached 3 shillings, when the wool purchased under the contract was sold. The transaction cleared for Emsley £3,000,000.

A few months later Mr. Fogg was sitting in his office in London. He had sold out his wool business which he had formerly owned in partnership with Emsley for a handsome sum and had become what is commonly called a scalper on the stock exchange, buying odd lots of stock and selling them for a very small profit. Looking up from his desk, he saw his old partner Emsley looking at him.

Fogg was an older man than Emsley, and since their parting his hair had whitened. There had been no quarrel between the two men. Indeed, Emsley had never uttered a word of reproach to his partner. Fogg stretched out his hand, and Emsley took it, though he did not grasp it heartily.

"I've come back," he said, "with a few pounds to make a new start."

Fogg, who had always regretted his action in precipitating his partner's failure, offered him what little assistance was in his power and asked him to come to his house and renew his acquaintance with his family.

"Is your little daughter Gladys there?" asked Emsley.

"Little! Gladys is a woman, nineteen years old."

"Oh, I forgot!" replied Emsley. "I remember her as a child who used to sit on my lap with her arms about my neck."

Emsley had imposed a condition of secrecy on the wool dealer in Australia as to his connection with the transaction that had made them both rich and was known to his friends in London as a poor man. He was still thirsting for revenge upon his former partner. One day he remarked to Fogg that stock of the Excelsior Gold Mining company of Australia that was selling at a very high figure on the exchange was worthless. Emsley said that he had lived in the region of the mine and there was no gold there. Fogg, seeing a chance to make money when the bubble should burst, sold a large number of shares to be delivered in the future, intending to buy them when they were selling for a song and make the difference in price.

The shares of the Excelsior Mining company, notwithstanding the tip given Mr. Fogg by his former partner, continued to advance. Emsley advised his partner to sell more. "The higher the price the greater will be the fall," he said. And so Fogg continued to sell while the price continued to rise. The speculator began to grow uneasy. It was rumored that there was no Excelsior stock for sale. Fogg had agreed to deliver his shares on a certain date, and if he could not buy them to deliver he would have to go into bankruptcy. He did not know that the man he had ruined had them all locked up in his vault.

Emsley had shrunk from visiting the family of the man he proposed to ruin. He had put off his appearance at Fogg's home until Fogg showed that he noticed his virtual refusal of hospitality, then made the call.

Crimes have been committed for love, but many a hand has been stayed by the same cause. Indeed, by love the world has been drawn from barbarism. Emsley was received by Gladys Fogg. When he saw her advancing toward him with outstretched hand, a smile on her lips, a warm welcome in her eyes, his scheme of vengeance tumbled like castles in the air. Gladys was the only being from whom before leaving England he had received any evidence of affection. The difference of many years then between them had melted away now that she was a young woman, he a middle aged man. In the soul that came out to him through the smile and the eye he saw something to make life worth living.

One day there was an exciting scene on the exchange. The price of Excelsior gold mining stock was going up ten or twenty points with every bid. Fogg had contracted to deliver the shares he had sold the next morning. To pay the market price for them would ruin him. When the exchange closed with 500 bid for the stock and none offered Fogg went home knowing that he would not be able to keep his agreement. In other words, he was a ruined man.

The next morning Emsley appeared at Fogg's office. Fogg looked up at him, then bent his eyes again to the floor.

"You would like some Excelsior stock, I suppose?" Emsley remarked unconcernedly.

Fogg looked at him again, but did not speak.

"How many shares have you sold?" asked Emsley.

Fogg named the number of shares. Emsley took a fat envelope from his pocket and threw it on Fogg's desk. Fogg opened it, took out a number of stock certificates, looked at several of them, then turned his eyes inquiringly on Emsley.

"Use what you need of them," said Emsley, "to make your deliveries today; tomorrow the bubble will burst."

Fogg met his contracts with the stock lent him and when the collapse came the next day purchased what he had sold, clearing a handsome profit.

When Emsley appeared under his true colors as a multimillionaire Fogg called on him to speak his gratitude for what he could not understand.

"Your thanks are not due to me," said Emsley, "but to the little girl whom we both love."

THE TENANT'S TOAST.

It Carried Off the Prize at Lord Panmure's Dinner.

The following story gives a good idea of the drinking style in England early in the last century. This was what the men of that day took for humor:

Two young English noblemen were paying a visit to Lord Panmure at Brechin castle. One day he wrote a letter to Paniathie, a tenant of his, to come and dine with him, and at the same time he ordered him to bring a sum of money.

Paniathie was aware when he received the order that something was to be done and went prepared.

After dinner Lord Panmure gave the first toast, which was, "All hats in the fire or £20 on the table." Four hats were immediately in the fire.

One of the English noblemen gave the next toast, "All coats in the fire or £50 on the table." Four coats were committed to the flames.

The other English nobleman gave the next toast, "All boots in the fire or £100 pounds on the table." The whole of the boots were committed to the flames.

Paniathie's toast came next, which was, "Two fore teeth in the fire or £200 on the table," and Paniathie pulled his teeth out and threw them into the fire.

The English noblemen looked amazed. They didn't know he had false teeth, and Paniathie went home without hat, coat or boots, but with £600 in his pocket. Lord Panmure thought much of his tenant after that.—Exchange.

THE DEAD SEA.

Old Popular Beliefs About It That Are Not Founded on Fact.

The Dead sea is a remarkable lake, forty-six miles long and from five to nine miles wide, situated in the southeast of Palestine and known from the time of Jerome (340-420 A. D.) as the "Dead" sea, because no fish of any kind have ever been found in its waters. Its surface, which is lower than that of any other body of water known, is 1,292 feet below the level of the Mediterranean. At its northern end it has a depth of about 1,300 feet, while the water at the southern extremity is only from three to twelve feet deep.

The Dead sea is fed by the Jordan from the north, but has no outlet, the water being apparently carried off by evaporation. The water of the Dead sea contains a large amount of the salts of magnesia and soda; as a consequence its specific gravity is high, and bathers float in it with ease.

The popular notions that the Dead sea exhales noxious vapors and that birds cannot fly over its surface and remain unharmed are not founded on fact.

According to tradition, Sodom and Gomorrah, "the cities of the plain," stood on the site now occupied by the Dead sea. This view, however, is no longer entertained, and it is now considered certain that the Dead sea existed in its present state during the days of Abraham and even much earlier.—New York American.

The Oldest Death Sentence.

The oldest death sentence extant is found in the Amherst papyri containing the trials of state criminals in Egypt, about 1300 B. C. The criminal in this case was found guilty of magic, which his judges state "was worthy of death, which he carried out, and he killed himself," apparently by stabbing, as in the Japanese harakiri, which is also of very ancient origin.

Among less civilized peoples drowning would seem to have been the earliest method of legal punishment, for about 450 B. C. the Britons killed their criminals by throwing them into a quagmire. Of other than capital punishments the oldest recorded comes from Chaldea, where it was enacted some 6,000 years ago that when any one maimed a slave "the hand that thus offended should pay him each day a measure of corn."

Victim of Their Fear.

"One thing that makes me positively sick," remarked a young matron vehemently to her husband, "is to have guests sit all through a meal and merely toy with the food as Mrs. So-and-so did last night. And she is the third dinner guest we have had lately who did the same thing. They are afraid of getting stout, and, although they accept invitations to meals, they never eat anything that isn't on their regular diet lists, and the consequence is that the hostess sits up and sees portion after portion of her well prepared food going to waste. It almost spoils the evening for me, and I shan't ask any one of the three here again—unless, by chance, they happen to get so thin they won't mind eating a square meal."—New York Press.

Much Interested.

"I hope you will be interested in yonder gentleman," said the hostess. "I have assigned him to take you out to dinner."

"I shall be," responded the lady addressed. "That gentleman was formerly my husband, and he's behind with his alimony."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Keeping Company.

"They kept company for a long time before they were married."

"Yes, and they've kept it most of the time since. Her relatives seem bound to live on them."

The worst use that can be made of success is to boast of it.

An Artist's Criticism.

Falguiere, the sculptor, tells a capital story of Henner, the great artist, who, although he lived in Paris all his life, never lost his Alsatian peasant accent or his country manners. But Henner was a very keen critic and had a clever way of showing his dislike of wordy enthusiasm. Falguiere, whose talent as a sculptor is known all the world over, was very fond of painting, but he did not paint particularly well. One day Henner was in his studio, and Falguiere showed him some of his pictures.

"What do you think of this one?" asked Falguiere.

"Superb!" said Henner, with his Alsation accent. "Marfelous!"

"And this one?"

"Broditchous!"

"And this one?"

"Suplime!"

Then the old man picked up a little bust which his friend had just finished:

"Ah!" he said. "Now, dat's good!"

"I never painted after that," said Falguiere.—New York Mail.

Have You Diplopia?

Diplopia, as its name signifies, is the defect which causes the eye to see two images of the same object. Of course the drunkard's temporary diplopia is well known, but it is possible for a quite sober person to perceive two keyholes instead of one, as the comic journals have it, and yet be a total abstainer. Diplopia is usually the result of squint or general eye weakness and is necessarily a distressing malady. As a rule, the defect manifests itself in regard to small objects at some distance—eight feet or so. For instance, one lamp will be seen slightly above another or to right or left. As a rule, the false image is fainter than the genuine one, but when I looked through the prism, which made me for the time being diplopic, I saw the second image quite as clearly as the first, but with a tendency to wander. The farther away the false image appears from the true the less distinct is its outline.—Strand Magazine.

Why Cuvier Wore a Beard.

"To save time is to lengthen life" is a proverb found in one form or another in almost every language, and Cuvier, the great naturalist, found life all too short to accomplish all he wished to do, though most economical of the hours.

"I found," he said, "that my shaving took me a quarter of an hour a day. This makes seven and a half hours in a month and ninety hours, or three days and eighteen hours, very nearly four days, a year. This discovery staggered me. Here was I complaining that time was too short, that the years flew by too swiftly, that I had not hours enough for work, and in the midst of my complaining I was wasting nearly four days a year in lathering my face with a shaving brush, and I resolved thenceforth to let my beard grow."—Omaha World-Herald.

A Story of Mark Twain.

When Mark Twain was beginning his career as a humorous lecturer he one day arranged with a woman acquaintance that she should sit in a box and start the applause when he should stroke his mustache. The lecturer started off so well that he did not need any such help, however, for he caught the audience from the first. By and by, when not saying anything worth of particular notice, he happened to pull his mustache, and his anxious ally in the box at once broke into furious applause. Mark was all but broken up by the misadventure and ever afterward carefully avoided employing such help to success.

Unique Tablecloth.

When a southeast wind is blowing the visitor to Cape Town is treated to a peculiar and interesting natural phenomenon, for under such conditions Table mountain, in the language of the natives, "puts on a tablecloth."

In other words, the thin line of fleecy cloud forming above it descends until it rests flat upon the mountain top, with its edges drooping gracefully over its sides. It is really not unlike the article of household use which gives it its name.

Splendid Tribute to Mr. Patton.

With the withdrawal of Captain Barclay from the list of candidates for the Congressional nomination the field is now open for two active candidates viz: Lewis Emery Jr. of McKean county and Charles Patton of Curwensville borough. Major I. McCreight was never very seriously considered as his name was announced at his request made in the fall of 1909 and after such request he decided not to enter the race of active candidates. As this paper has before stated the nomination belongs to Clearfield county and should be so conceded. McKean county has had the place for two terms and Cameron for two terms and Clearfield county having a population equal to ⅔ of the whole district should certainly be accorded some rights and privileges. Centre county offered no candidate this year because the leaders in that county conceded it to Clearfield county and Clearfield county Republicans should heartily support the candidacy of Charles E. Patton. Lewis Emery, Jr. has but slight claims upon the Republicans of the district because he has been acting with the Democrats for some years and the independent Republicans so that from a party standpoint his claims are very meagre. Mr. Patton comes from a family of stalwart Republicans; a family that always supported the ticket and contributed liberally to the party's support. His father served in Congress when Lincoln was President and supported the President in the trying hours of rebellion. John Patton, Jr., deceased, served a term in the United States Senate while A. E. Patton, deceased, served a term in the Senate of Pennsylvania. They have been a useful family in public life and Charles will make a safe representative of the people and should be nominated.—Clearfield Raftsman's Journal.

Nevertheless—

"There are a great many Democrats of Pennsylvania who are fit for the Governorship. There are a still larger [illegible] question of fitness, however, is not a matter for individual determination. The party at large should do the determining. The party may make mistakes, but it is not so liable to err in its estimate of character and capacity as are individual aspirants. As a rule those who are best qualified for great service are the last to proclaim themselves. Philadelphia Record."

Nevertheless, Boss Guffey has slated C. LaRue Munson as the Democratic candidate for Governor and that settles it. "The party at large should do the determining," as the "Record" says, but it never has the chance, Boss Guffey attending to all that.

Announces for State Senator.

In another column we publish the announcement card of Joseph Alexander, of Madera, Clearfield county, who has entered the field as a candidate for State Senator. Mr. Alexander served six years in the House, at Harrisburg, and four years ago he was a candidate for the nomination of State Senator, eventually withdrawing from the race. While in Bellefonte last week he called at "The Republican" office, explaining that he desired the support of Centre county Republicans but that he would be unable, in the short time before the primaries, to make a personal canvass. Mr. Alexander is an estimable gentleman and, if nominated and elected, we believe that he is qualified to ably represent the Thirty-fourth district at Harrisburg.

Has No Use for Emery.

Congressman Chas. F. Barclay of the 21st district has withdrawn as a candidate for reelection, on account of continued ill health. This leaves the Republican nomination to Patton, of Clearfield, or Emery of McKean.

The Journal regrets the retirement of Capt. Barclay, as we regarded him as an able, conscientious representative, deserving of re-election. We would also dislike to see his place filled by such a doubtful Republican as Lewis Emery, Jr., as we regard him as no Republican at all. He is a spectacular kicker, ready to join the Democrats or any other element to fight the Republican party. If the Republicans of Cameron, McKean, Clearfield and Centre have any loyalty left, they will turn down the man who did his level best to defeat Edwin S. Stuart, Robert K. Young, Henry Houck, and the whole Republican ticket four years ago. In fact Emery has devoted most of his political effort to fighting the Republican organization in this State, so that in the selection of a man to stand in Congress for Republicanism, Emery is about the last one's loyal Republican would be likely to choose. As a chronic office seeker Emery should run on the Democratic ticket. Potter County Journal.

Capt. Bennison Dead.

nania Volunteers. He was appointed Corporal, November 10, 1864, was commissioned First Lieutenant, September 29, 1864; Captain, March 16, 1865, and discharged from service, July 1, 1865. One of the bravest men who ever wore the blue, Captain Bennison had many thrilling experiences during the war. The friendships he made during those troublous days continued to the time of his death, and by those who knew him he was held in affectionate regard. The accompanying photograph of Captain Bennison was taken with a group of survivors of the 56th Regiment, held several years ago at Gettysburg. With the photograph of the group was the regimental colors which were captured at Groveton, near Manassas, on the night before the Second Bull Run battle. Captain Bennison escaped, but the late John Ward, of Stormstown, who was also a color bearer, with Captain Bennison, was captured. Captain Bennison was member of Grove Brothers Post No. 262, of Howard. In 1868 he was married to Miss Margaret McDowell at Lock Haven, and for many years engaged in farming in the easter n end of Marion township.

Politically Captain Bennison was a Republican and filled a number of township offices with satisfaction to all and much credit to himself. He was school director for a number of consecutive terms. He was frequently urged to seek higher offices but refrained from entering politics, preferring the quiet farm life. Three years ago he removed to Howard to live a retired life. Soon after going there he became interested in the organization of a bank at that place and when the bank was organized he was chosen as its president and continued in that position to the present. Captain Bennison was a man well informed on all the important topics of the day. was always willing to learn from others and free to impart any information sought of him. His pleasant ways and upright character won for him hosts of friends everywhere and he will be greatly missed in the community in which he lived.

The funeral took place from his late home in Howard Wednesday forenoon at ten o'clock, services being conducted at the house by Rev. S. V. Bergen, of Coal Centre, assisted by Rev. R. S. Taylor and Rev. E. F. Faust, of Howard. Interment was made at Jacksonville.

A large number of the friends of the deceased and his devoted wife from Bellefonte and Nittany valley attended the funeral.

DEATH OF JOHN HOLMES

Well Known Retired Farmer's Sudden Death at Howard.

John Holmes, a well known retired farmer and prominent resident of Howard, died suddenly about one o'clock, on Monday afternoon, last. Mr. Holmes was a close friend of the late Captain Bennison and his death followed but a short time after he had spent a part of the day at the Bennison homestead. On Sunday, a few hours after Captain Bennison's death, Mr. Holmes went to the Bennison residence to give such assistance as he could there. He returned home and during the night he became ill. It was believed that he was suffering from neuralgia of the chest. During the latter part of the night he seemed to be much better and on Monday forenoon his condition was such that no concern was felt, it being the belief of those about him that he soon would be about as usual. About one o'clock that afternoon Mrs. Holmes stepped out of the bedroom to get a glass of water and when she returned she was horrified to find her husband dead. It is supposed that his death was due to heart failure.

Mr. Holmes was aged about 70 years. He spent the greater part of his life at Jacksonville. About ten years ago he removed to Nittany where he superintended a large farm for almost two years, then moving to Howard, at which place he made his home until the time of his death. Surviving are a widow, and son, Richard, who is connected with the Kerbaugh Construction Company, in New Jersey, and two daughters, Mrs. Charles Hoffman, whose husband died about two years ago, and Mrs. J. C. Weirick, who also lives at Howard. Mr. Holmes was married to Jennie Conley, a daughter of ex-Sheriff Conley, and the only sister of J. W. Conley, of Centre Hall, the father of J. Will Conley, of Bellefonte.

MRS. MINNIE S. HARPER.

Death on Sunday afternoon, last closed the eyes and ended the suffering of Mrs. Minnie Schreyer Harper, widow of the late Jonathan Harper, at her residence on West Linn Street. During an illness that covered a period of several months she had been a patient sufferer, much of the time being compelled to remain seated in a chair in order to breathe. For some days prior to her death it was realized by those at her bedside that the end was near at hand, and on Sunday afternoon, shortly before 3 o'clock she passed into eternal sleep. The announcement of her death occasioned many expressions of sorrow from her numerous admiring friends. Mrs. Harper was formerly Minnie Schreyer and was married to Jonathan Harper, for years one of Bellefonte's leading and influential citizens and business men. In early life she united with the Reformed church and until illness confined her to the house she continued actively her religious work. Deceased was aged about 67 years and is survived by the following children: Misses Lulu and Jennie and Maude; Jerome, of Indiana, and Edward, located at Curtin. Surviving also are the following brothers and sisters: Harry and Charles Schreyer, of Chicago; Hayes Schreyer, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Henry Hoffman, of Pittsburg. Funeral services were held this morning, conducted by Rev. Dr. Ambrose M. Schmidt, pastor of St. John's Reformed church. Interment was made in the Union cemetery.

HON. ROBERT A. SANKEY.

A telegram received Thursday afternoon, May 12, by Hon. Leonard Rhone, announced the death of his brother-in-law, former Judge Robert A. Sankey, at his home in Wichita, Kansas, which occurred at noon of that day. Interment was made in that city Tuesday of this week.

Judge Sankey was a native of Potter township, having been raised on the Sankey homestead, near Potters Mills, and was a son of James Sankey. After the Civil War, in which he participated, Mr. Sankey took up the study of law with the then well known law firm of McAllister & Beaver, and was later admitted to the Centre county bar. The west had attractions for him, and he finally located at Newton, Iowa, where he was married to Miss Rodgers, who survives him. As an attorney Mr. Sankey was very successful, and enjoyed a large practice that proved highly profitable in a financial way. In time he was obliged to seek a climate more congenial, and this brought him to Wichita, Kansas, at a time when the now prosperous city was having reverses. Mr Sankey saw what he thought a good investment in real estate, and bought city property to a large extent. The tide soon turned, and Wichita advanced with rapid strides, and the real estate multiplied in value. Later Mr. Sankey was elected judge of the Wichita courts, and also held other positions of trust, being one of the most influential men in the city.

Mr. Sankey was east about three years ago, having come here on account of the delicate health of his sister, Mrs. Rhone, in Centre Hall, who died before his return to the west. Mr. Sankey is the last survivor of the James Sankey family and was aged about seventy-four years. Centre Hall Reporter.

Herdic Wood, of Williamsport, the noted bandmaster and leader of the famous Repasz band of that city. His death occured on Friday morning last, and interment was made on Sunday afternoon, with military honors. Herdic Wood was a man with a host of warm friends and admirers. By all who knew him he was held in high regard as a musician, as a good citizen, as a man.

Ready for Primaries.

has rendered loyal party service in the past. He is exceptionally strong in Clearfield County, which with Centre comprises the Thirty-fourth Senatorial district. To be elected, the Republican nominee must be strong not only in Centre but also in Clearfield, and this is a factor which, together with the fitness of the candidate, should be kept in mind at the primaries. Centre County should have at least one candidate on the ticket, and Mr. Womelsdorff is the only aspirant from our county whose name has been entered for the primaries.

There are two additional aspirants for this honor. They are Joseph Alexander and Frederic R. Scofield, both of Clearfield county. Both are able, hard-working Republicans. Either would make a good Senator. Since the fitness of all three men is conceded it becomes chiefly a question of expediency as to which one the Republicans of Centre County should support. We are satisfied that the Republicans of this county will select the man who can command the greatest support in the two counties, which, as we have pointed out, is essential to win the election in November.

For Republican County Chairman, Henry C. Quigley has no opposition and his election is assured. Mr. Quigley's ability is conceded. He will make an able, hardworking chairman. There are some Republicans who may have preferred some personal favorite, but their interest in party success should, and we are confident will, prompt them to turn in and accord Mr. Quigley their earnest co-operation and hearty support both at the primaries and during his term as chairman.

David Chambers, of Clarence, and County Chairman Harry Keller, of Bellefonte, have no opposition for election as delegates to the Republican State convention. Both have rendered unselfish, faithful service to the party and are deserving of the honor to which they aspire and for which they have no opposition.

On the Democratic side, the slate was made up long ago and will be pushed through at the primaries in jig-step time. Senator George M. Dimeling, of Clearfield, one of Boss Guffey's personal lieutenants, is slated for renomination. The Centre County Democratic managers took their orders from Guffey and entered no candidate against Dimeling. W. C. Heinle has been slated for the Democratic nomination for Congress and like J. Calvin Meyer, who is slated for renomination for the House, at Harrisburg, has no opposition. Arthur B. Kimport will be elected Democratic County Chairman.

For delegates to the Democratic State convention there are three holes to be filled and seven pegs with which to fill them. The seven candidates are A. L. Auman, J. M. Cunningham, James Cornelly, John G. Dauberman, R. M. Foster, William H. Noll, Jr., and A. C. Thompson. Just as soon as Guffey says the word it will be known which three are to be elected.

Benjamin Franklin said:

"The way to wealth, if you desire it, is as plain as the way to market. It depends chiefly on two words—industry and frugality. He that gets all he can honestly and saves all he gets (necessary expenses excepted) will certainly become rich."

The hand of death fell heavily upon our community the forepart of the week, and in calling from our midst two of our most highly esteemed citizens has cast a pall of sadness and gloom over the town. We are reminded that sickness does not always cut our lives short and that the death summons may come suddenly. While the illness of Captain Bennison extended over a period of several years and John Holmes had spent many an hour at his bedside to cheer him in his affliction and was with him in his last moments, death came suddenly to the latter and within twenty-four hours after his neighbor across the street. These two gentlemen will be greatly missed in Howard and their friends deeply sympathize with the bereaved families in their hour of affliction.

Scotia.

Here again, as the Irishman said to the rabbit.

Scotia has not been heard from of late, but it is still on the map, as can be been by the heavy train of ore taken away from here every day to the furnaces at Bellefonte. Through the bulldog determination of Harry Valentine, there is more ore mined here today than ever before. He has overcome obstacles that seemed to be too great to be conquered. When he came here, men told him that they pitied him and could not congratulate him, but he said nothing and kept on digging, and with the present splendid results.

Just after starting to work last Saturday morning, John Zanes had the misfortune to break one of his legs. He picked up a large piece of ore and in stepping over the railroad track, he fell, the ore falling on him. He was taken to the Bellefonte hospital, where his many friends hope he will have a speedy recovery.

John Baudis, the merry-go-round man, went to Snow Shoe on Monday, where he will set up his machine for the first time this year. From that point he will move west, where he thinks there is more money than in the park, where he has been for the last three years. His friends all wish him success.

One of the best places to spend an evening is at the bachelor apartments of David P. Weaver. Uncle Dave, as he is called, possesses a fine tenor voice and when it comes to dancing he can make the younger people sit up and take notice.

A. C. Markley, the night fireman, has been busy the last week, calling the people out to see the comet about four o'clock in the morning. Everybody has been called out, so that the comet is no longer a curiosity here.

John Hassinger appears to be the only follower of Izaak Walton. Almost every evening he may be seen leaving home with his rod and line and about dark he returns with a nice string of catfish. That means fish for John's breakfast.

BRANKS

An Instrument of Torture for Long Tongued Women.

It is on record that the brank was used on a few occasions to punish men guilty of using obscene language, but such instances were rare, and the brank, or scold's bridle, was made, as the name indicates, to be worn by women whose great fault was that of possessing too long a tongue—a fairly common failing today! Although never a legalized instrument of torture, it was nevertheless much used during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, and is frequently mentioned in the literature of those times, while an early English poet shows the general attitude toward it in the lines:

But for my daughter Juliane, would she were well bolted with a bridle,
That leaves her work to play the clack, and lets her work stand idle.

It cannot be denied that the brank was often used without justice or mercy, for those who authorized its usage were petty provincial tyrants and borough physicians, and no doubt it was a handy weapon wherewith to pay out old scores. It seems very strange that it was not put a stop to but perhaps those in a position to closure the practice were secretly in favor of it.

There are still a great many of the old scold's bridles extant, and Cheshire possesses no fewer than 13 of them, and was ever well to the fore in their use, although there is no reason to suppose that the women of that county were possessed of more shrewish tongues than their neighbors. In shape the bridles differed greatly, some being fairly merciful and others very much the reverse. The ordinary brank was a framework of iron, which was locked on the culprit's head. In front of the mouth a plate, a gag, or sometimes a sharp knife, was fixed in such a position that it entered the mouth and pressed on the tongue causing agony if the "unruly member" was moved. At the back a short chain was attached to the collar which was held by the guard, who, if he chose, could inflict severe wounds on his charge by jerking the chain. Sometimes the delinquent was chained to the pillory, where she stood, an object of scorn and derision, for as long as the beadle chose, while the high-spirited youth of the town pelted her with objectionable refuse. The general custom was, however, to lead her through the town, so that all might see and recognize in her one overfond of "playing the clack." One surmises that very few women had to undergo this treatment a second time, unless, that is, the local authorities bore them a grudge.

[redacted] preserved which has the date 1633 inscribed on it, with the couplet: "Chester presents Walton with a bridle, to curb women's tongues that talk too idle." There is a legend about this particular brank which, although probably without foundation in fact, is worthy of repetition. A certain doctor who lived at Chester became enamored of a young lady at Walton. He proposed and was accepted, but to the chagrin of the young couple the girl's parents would not hear of the match. In those days a Gretna Green marriage was impossible, for Gretna Green did not exist, but none the less the couple decided to make a runaway match of it. It was necessary for the success of their plans that the old nurse of the doctor's betrothed should be let into the secret, which she accordingly was, and all would have been well had not this woman revealed to a bosom friend, under the seal of secrecy, the day fixed for the flight. The bosom friend told her bosom friend, and in a few hours the story reached the ears of the young lady's mother. The match, of course, never came off, and it is said that in his disgust the young doctor had the bridle made and presented it to the citizens of Walton.

Some of the earliest branks came from over the border, and it is not too much to say that the Scottish people first invented the scold's bridle. A brank is still to be seen which was used at Forfar, and which was worn by condemned witches on their way to execution. It is a fearsome instrument, for the tongue plate is a triple spur, with exceedingly sharp points. The laceration that could be, and no doubt often was, inflicted on the witch's mouth on the way to the stake was terrible. Not a few branks were made to ridicule the wearer, as, for example, the "led by the nose" bridle, a brank fashioned with an outside nose, to which the leading chain was attached. Another of the same ilk had a large perforated carrot protruding from the mouth, and so on. A brank of quite another kind was the "buffeting helmet," which was more like a helmet than a brank and somewhat intricate of design. The wearer could not see out of it, so could not know who buffeted him. It is probable that these helmets were used for men and not for women.

A record of a woman sentenced to the brank runs as follows: "Dec. 3, 1714, Elizabeth, wife of George Holborn, was punished with the branks for two hours at the Market Cross, Morpeth, by order of Mr. Thomas Gait, and Mr. George Nicholls, then bailiffs, for scandalous and opprobrious language to several persons in town, as well as to said bailiffs." The last time that a "scold" bridle was used in public was at Congleton, in Cheshire, where they were apparently unwilling to give up a custom which they had always looked upon with much favor. Whether branks were much, or ever, used in private life, it is difficult to say, but one thing is certain, that both in public and private life the brank has left us forever, and only serves as a rather grim reminder of the days of our forefathers.—London Globe.

The Starvation Cult.

Some people too fat and some are too lean. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Spratt seem to have a majority in this country. Happy he or she who can eat according to the dictates of appetite without thought of the waist line. Unfortunately, the happy seem to be the few, especially among women. The dread of adipose tissue in the female sex is becoming something awful. It is taking the place of the discarded orthodox hell of our ancestors. With characteristic energy women are devoting time, attention and money to their bodies in a way that would have pleased the ancient Greeks if they had been obliged to wear costumes of the present day. Fortunately this was not the case. Aspasia never wore corsets, nor a gown that hooked up the back not even a Chantecler hat.

Many and marvelous are the methods attempted for reducing fat, for the lean do not seem to suffer nearly so much in mind, body or spirit. The latest hobby is to stop eating. It has its advantages up to a certain point where funeral expenses begin to figure in the situation. Doubtless most of us eat too much, at least more than is necessary. There are a lot of wise old scientific men who can tell us to a fraction just how many calories (whatever the term may mean) we need each day and what foods will produce them most economically, every fact being considered. From a purely academic point of view it looks as if it would be possible to manufacture tablets containing the exact amount of nutrition, potential energy, etc., so that we needn't have cooks or dinner tables. Unfortunately, no one wants such a situation. We all like our appetities and prefer to tickle them on stated occasions.

It is all very well for the unco' fat to starve awhile, but we should think it would be uncommonly annoying. The normal human stomach rings a dinner gong three times a day and the call is answered with great unanimity. Some experts lay down a diet of asparagus and cabbage and a lot of stuff which cows enjoy, but few there be who are willing to take such food. It is hard so be fat, but it is agonizing to go hungry all the time. Being fat is not a crime. In fact, fatness and good humor seem to go together. The fat are always optimists, while the lean are apt to be pessimists. It seems wrong to flout nature which is trying to give us a physical temperament simply because the demands of fashion call for a certain cut of gown.

After all, if you are of the fat sort it isn't likely you can ever be anything else and have life worth living. The contented mind goes with the stomach and the wise person will follow the dictates of his appetite normally and forget that he or she tips the scales a few pounds beyond the normal.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Railroad Coach Has Fireplace.

A magnificent private car, said to be the most sumptuous railroad coach ever constructed, has been sent from England to South America for the use of the president of the Argentine Republic. The June number of Popular Mechanics contains a description and illustrations of the car. It says:

"The coach is 73 ft. long, and 10½ ft. wide, and is constructed of steel. The exterior is painted in cream with gold and blue lining, the national Argentine colors. At one end is the president's day saloon, a compartment 17 ft. 3 in. long, decorated in the Louis XVI style, with green silk panels and carpet. At one end of this is a real fireplace with mirror above, and means for ventilation. The roof is tastefully carved. Adjoining this compartment is a bedroom, also fitted with green carpet and upholstery, and furnished with a bedstead finished in old gold, with the Argentine coat of arms at the foot. The bedroom has three doors, one leading to the day saloon, one to the corridor which runs along the side, and one to the bathroom. By locking any one of these doors, all become locked. The bathroom is provided with a "needle bath," and is finished in marble with silver-plated fittings. The upper panels are of enameled metal, and the floor is covered with india rubber and cork mats.

"The next compartment is a study or library, finished in mahogany, with red leather chairs and a red carpet. Next to the study are two more bedrooms, upholstered with French gray silk panels, the general scheme being white, with green leather chairs and carpets. These two rooms have one bathroom. A kitchen and attendants' compartment take up the remaining space in this traveling palace."

VESTAL VIRGINS.

They Kept the Sacred Fires Alight In Ancient Rome.

Ovid tells us that the first temple of Vesta at Rome was constructed of wattled walls and roofed with thatch, like the primitive huts of the inhabitants. It was little other than a circular covered fireplace and was tended by the unmarried girls of the community. It served as the public hearth of Rome, and on it glowed, unextinguished throughout the year, the sacred fire which was supposed to have been brought from Troy and the continuance of which was thought to be linked with the fortunes of the city.

The name Vesta is believed to be derived from the same root as the Sanskrit was, which means "to dwell, to inhabit," and shows that she was the goddess of home, and home had the hearth as its focus. A town, a state, is but a large family, and what the domestic hearth was to the house the temple of the perpetual fire became to the city. Every town had its vesta, or common hearth, and the colonies derived their fire from the mother hearth.

Should a vestal maiden allow the sacred fire to become extinguished she was beaten till her blood flowed, and the new fire was solemnly rekindled by rubbing together of dry wood or by focusing of sun's rays. The circular form and domed roof of the temple of Vesta were survivals of the prehistoric huts of the aborigines, which were invariably round.—Cornhill Magazine.

RAIN FORMATION.

Cold Air Squeezes the Moisture Out of Warm Air.

Warm air is capable of holding more moisture in suspension than is cold air. When by any means a layer or current of warm air which is saturated with moisture is suddenly cooled a portion of the vapor must fall as rain. Cold shrinks the heated air as pressure does a wet sponge and with precisely the same results. In mountainous countries this cooling down of the warm and damp air is most commonly produced by the air being brought into the neighborhood of mountain tops, which are cold.

It is for this reason that in such countries the showers mostly originate among the mountains and come through the valleys out upon the plains.

It will be easily understood that the higher the mountain the more striking will be the effects produced. If it be a snow capped peak in a tropical region a cloud will be formed such as to conceal the summit all the time. This cloud will be constantly growing on the side of the mountain toward which the currents of warm and moist air are set, for on that side the air is being cooled down, but after it has been driven over the peak it will waste away as rapidly, for it is then coming in contact with warmer air again.

From such high peaks the cloud rarely breaks away as a shower. All the surplus moisture of the air is deposited in the form of rain or snow upon the peaks over which the air passes.

The Jellyfish.

The bay of Naples abounds in medusae, or jellyfish, often growing as large as two feet in diameter and weighing fifty and sixty pounds. Some of them shine at night with a greenish light and are known as noctiluca (night lanterns) by the natives. The jellyfish sometimes make migrations in great groups, sometimes so large and so thick as to impede the navigation of vessels, like the floating plants in the Sargasso sea of the tropics. These shoals of medusae, as they are called, may be so dense that a piece of timber plunged in among them will be held upright as if stuck in the mud, and ordinary rowboats cannot force their way through them. Their migrations have never been explained. They are irregular and occur at no particular season of the year and under no particular influences.

The Record of Raindrops.

It is by carefully noting small and apparently insignificant things and facts that men of science are enabled to reach some of their most surprising and interesting conclusions. In many places the surface of rocks, which millions of years ago must have formed sandy or muddy seabeaches, is found to be pitted with the impressions of raindrops. In England it has been noticed that in many cases the eastern sides of these depressions are the more deeply pitted, indicating that the raindrops which formed them were driven before a west wind. From this the conclusion is drawn that in the remote epoch when the pits were formed the majority of the storms in England came from the west, just as they do today.—Harper's Weekly.

A Tree In a Thunderstorm.

Every one is aware that it is not wise to seek a tree's shelter in a thunderstorm, but if you must take refuge there then climb to the topmost branches. It has been proved that the upper boughs of trees during a storm would be the safest position, and it is said that birds in the branches are seldom killed. When the tree is struck by lightning it is the trunk which, presumably from its greater dryness, is a bad conductor and which therefore suffers the most.

Very Like a Bull.

An Irish litterateur when eating an apple pie flavored with a few green gooseberries exclaimed with gusto, "Ah, what a delicious apple pie it would be if it was all made of green gooseberries!"

Good Form

Tact is the highest type of good form, and it is a virtue that only needs exercising to become a fixed habit.

A woman of tact is one who feels that the story told to hurt your feelings is essentially bad form and inconsiderate of the feelings of others.

A woman of tact is the one who is courteous to old people, who laughs with the young and who makes herself agreeable to all women in all conditions of life.

A woman of tact is one who makes her good morning a pleasant greeting, her visit a bright spot in the day and her goodby a hope that she may come again.

A woman of tact is one who does not gauge people by their clothes or their riches, but who condemns bad manners.

A veritable woman of tact is the best type of a Christian, for her very consideration makes other women long to imitate her. Remember that to do your work as a woman of tact means more than speaking from platform or assumed elevation.

A woman of tact is one who is courteous under all circumstances and in every condition in which she may be placed. She is the woman who can receive the unwelcome guest with a smile so bright and a handshake so cordial that in trying to make the welcome seem real it becomes so.

A woman of tact is one whose love for humanity is second only in her life's devotion and whose watchword is unselfishness in thought and action.

By making self last it finally becomes natural to have it so.

The Chance Acquaintance.

The question is often asked about recognizing the man or woman whom unconventionality has allowed one to meet. There can be no set rule. For instance, a man may have rendered some great assistance in an accident or have protected you from rudeness in public. In this case it would be impossible to pass such a chance acquaintance without a civil nod or a smile of recognition should you happen to meet him again. But it must be remembered that in all cases an introduction is in order before friendship can begin.

Always remember that you do not know the mere acquaintance. Be cautious and endeavor to swing the conversation into impersonal channels. Men often laugh at the foolish girl who pours out her childish enthusiasms into their unsympathetic ears. Never talk or act in such a way as will cause shame or regret in the calm consideration of the next day.

Relation-in-law Duties.

When a girl marries it is the duty of her husband's family to give at least one reception in her honor, that she may meet their friends and be made welcome.

And it should not be forgotten that, even if the choice is what may be termed distasteful to his family, a man marries to suit himself, and it is a reflection upon all of them if they do not try to make the best of the matter and prevent remarks that are not complimentary. Such a course is far the more dignified for a mother and sisters of the man to take, and at the earliest opportunity it is proper to give a reception, inviting personal friends to meet the new relation-in-law.

Usually such an affair is held at night, in order that the men of those families invited may be present. Then cards are issued in the name of the father and mother of the bridegroom.

The Letter of Introduction.

When one gives a letter of introduction to any one it is always safest and best to write privately in advance of the letter of presentation, giving the person to whom the letter is addressed some idea of the social position, tastes, etc., of the bearer of the note or card.

Letters of introduction are, as a rule, in the form of very brief notes worded somewhat as follows:

My Dear Mrs. Black—It gives me the greatest pleasure to present to you Miss R. (Mrs. R. or Mr. R.). She has been a friend of mine for a number of years, and whatever you can do for her during her stay in —— I will consider a favor conferred upon me personally.

Then may follow a few remarks on subjects of common interest.

If one does not wish to write a note the words "Introducing Miss R." may be written across the top of one's visiting card.

Little Points of Etiquette.

It is courteous to shake hands with a guest in your own house, and many hostesses repeat the handshaking when he leaves.

It is only necessary to bow an acknowledgement of an introduction though shaking hands is cordial and not considered old fashioned, as formerly.

A girl or young woman should rise when an older woman enters the room and remain standing until she is seated. It is customary to rise to receive a guest, whether it be man or woman.

SPECIAL AUTO

Surprised Her.

A gentleman who had spent the greater portion of his life in Canada relates an amusing experience which befell him.

He had been on a hunting expedition for several days in the backwoods, roughing it rather severely, and on taking a seat in a railway train returning homeward he looked as begrimed and weather beaten a trapper as ever brought his skins into a settlement.

He happened to find a seat next to a young lady, evidently belonging to Boston, who, after taking stock of him for a few minutes, remarked:

"Don't you find an utterly passionful sympathy with nature's mountains and the dim aisles of the horizon touching forests, my good man?"

"Oh, yes," replied the apparent backwoodsman, "and also I am frequently drawn into an exaltation of rapt soulfulness and beatific incandescent infinity of abstract contiguity when my horse stumbles."

"Indeed!" said the young lady, much surprised. "I had no idea the lower classes felt like that."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Nothing More to Say.

"Sir," said the candidate, "you promised to vote for me!"

"Vell," said his Dutch friend, "and vat if I did?"

"Well, sir, you voted against me!"

"Vell, vat if I did?"

"Then, sir, you lied!"

"Vell, vat if I did?"

"Does she? Well, say, you should see her in a bargain rush."—Detroit Free Press.

Children and Money Getting.

"A number of parents of my acquaintance cultivate the business instinct in their children," says Mary Louise Graham in Woman's Home Companion. "They pay them for services rendered to the family; they urge and help them to earn and save money in every possible way, even by doubling the amount of their savings. Now I should as soon think of tipping their father for carrying packages as of paying one of my children for any ordinary services to the household. Besides stimulating a love of money, this practise works against the feeling of reciprocity, of solidarity, which I am so anxious to cultivate. Much is done for them often at a great sacrifice; it is fitting that they should in their turn render services. I cannot see that they are exempt from gratitude for the much love and care that is given them, because they were not brought into the world of their own volition, a fallacy that is made the excuse for much selfishness. Therefore, the boys care for the furnace, the cellar, the sidewalk and the garden; the girls do a great many things about the house. I give them money as much as I can afford, for I want them to learn the value of it, but it is a free gift.

"I do not know when I have been so shocked as I was last Thanksgiving in New York City, when children, respectable looking in spite of their fancy dress costumes, and evidently coming from comfortable homes, stopped me on the street and asked me for money. 'What are you going to give me for Thanksgiving'? was said to me many times in every block. They tell me it is a regular custom in New York City, accepted there without apparent protest. What could be a better school for the mercenary spirit of the age which people lament so much?"

NAMING THE BABY

Foolish Appellations Bestowed on Helpless Infants.

People who have followed the changes in Christian names can almost tell a woman's age by her name, a fact which ought to give parents food for thought when it comes to the naming of a girl baby.

Fifteen years ago every mother in the United States and Canada was choosing Dorothy, Margery, Phyllis or some other English name of the late eightee th century for her youngest, while for the last 10 years Catharine, with a "C," Elizabeth and other strait-laced names have succeeded the bookish Phyllis.

Babies coming into the world at the present time, says The New York Tribune, are getting the benefit of quaint family names almost forgotten, and more than likely despised, by the original owners, as the fad is to have as unusual a Christian name as possible picked out. Hence Dorinda, Anne, Euphemia, Sophia, Cynthia, Justina and others are culled for occasions from the family Bibles, or names of Puritan savor, such as Priscilla or Deborah, are taken from New England annals.

Another fashion which has already taken hold is that of combining the names of the parents or of other members of the family to produce a name which has the merit of singularity and sounds "Christian" at least. Georgeanna is one of these names, although the previous existence of Georgeanna would seem to have made its invention unnecessary. Jeremina and Johanna have both been used, and others more curious still are bestowed upon helpless infancy.

Fortunately the fad for Spanish names was of short duration, for such combinations as Lolita Smith or Inez Jones, which abounded for a time, do not appeal to the ears of most people. The craze for changing the spelling of common names, seems also to have passed away. Edith is no longer Edyth, and the Maes now wish to be known as Marys, for the fashion in names shows signs of turning to the plain, practical and lasting.

Surnames are often bestowed upon boys for first names, and it is usual and desirable also to have a surname as a middle name. These names ought in reason to be family names or the names of persons closely associated with the family. Thus the names of a godparent may appropriately be given to a child, as well as the name of a grandparent or an ancestor. The ostensible purpose of such names is to indicate the ramifications and friendships of the family, and they serve among strangers as a kind of letter of introduction. But nowadays they are often bestowed with little regard for these considerations, greatly to the indignation of those who bear the patronymics in question by hereditary right.

"There ought to be a copyright on names," complains the bearer of a cognomen which dates back to Colonial times and is associated directly and through the connections of the family with many of the most important events in the country's history, for which reason it is greatly sought after by borrowers.

"It is a downright robbery," she went on, "to take a name that doesn't belong to you, and the strange thing is that people want to do it. You might as well buy family portraits in the open market, as take other folks' names. Of course, I am proud of my name, and if it weren't mine I should still have a great regard for it, but I wouldn't want it. The reason I am proud to bear it is because it is mine."

Such complaints, it is needless to say, fall upon deaf ears and even in her own circle of friends this woman finds sinners against her code of ethics and propriety.

Liquid Air as Blasting Explosive.

Liquid air has a commercial value in England as a blasting explosive, and is used in many mines for the dislodgment of coal. The cartridges are made of thick phosphor-bronze, and the explosion takes place in about six minutes after loading. About 50 tons of coal can be broken by one shot.

The explosive power of liquid air depends upon its property of turning suddenly into vapor at a high temperature. The cartridge is placed in position before it is loaded with a charge of liquid air. If the vessel in which the liquid air is contained is sufficiently tight, very high expansive power is attained, and for this reason it is stored in vessels having a small opening.

Liquid air was first used as an explosive only in combination with other substances.—From Popular Mechanics.

If you want a hard case there is the case of a man who late at night bought a bottle of whisky at a public house—price, 3s. 6d.—says the London Globe. He handed over a five pound note, and the publican would not change it. "All right," said the customer. "Give me the whisky and 16s. 6d. and keep my five pound note." Next morning the customer came in, planked down four sovereigns and said, "Give me back my five pound note and we shall be straight." The publican and the sinner looked at each other. Can you tell at a glance which got the better of the bargain when the customer went away with his five pound note in his pocket?

The question puzzled a whole office full of literary, financial, sporting, philosophical and editorial men—until it reached a girl of eighteen who is engaged in dealing with cash. All the rest were calculating on paper and reaching the result by devious ways. The cash girl saw it in a flash of the eye. Do you? Shut your eyes and do it in five seconds if you wish to beat the cash girl.

Wonderful Victoria Falls.

"It is well nigh impossible to describe a scene of such wonder, such wildness," says Lady Sarah Wilson in her "South African Memories" of the Victoria falls. But she gives this graphic description: "Standing on a point flush with the river before it makes its headlong leap, we gazed first on the swirling water losing itself in snowy spray which beat relentlessly on face and clothes while the great volume was noisily disappearing to unknown and terrifying depths. The sightseer tries to look across, to strain his eyes and to see beyond that white mist which obscures everything, but it is an impossible task, and he can but guess the width of the falls, slightly horseshoe in shape, from the green trees which seem so far away on the opposite bank and are only caught sight of now and then as the wind causes the spray to lift. At the same time his attention is fixed by a new wonder—the much talked of rainbow. Never varying, never changing, that perfect shaped arc is surely more typical of eternity there than anywhere else."

Curran and Lord Clare.

Curran, the Irish advocate, was on terms of intense enmity with Lord Clare, the Irish lord chancellor, with whom, when a member of the bar, he fought a duel and whose hostility to him on the bench, he always said, caused him losses in his professional income which he could not estimate at less than £30,000. The incidents attendant on this disagreement were at times ludicrous in the extreme. One day when it was known that Curran was to make an elaborate statement in chancery Lord Clare brought a large Newfoundland dog to the bench with him and during the progress of the most material part of the case began in full court to fondle the animal. Curran stopped at once. "Go on, go on, Mr. Curran!" said Lord Clare. "Oh, I beg a thousand pardons, my lord! I really took it for granted that your lordship was engaged in consultation!"

Two Smart Actors.

In a popular historic drama the actor who takes the part of Napoleon is required to read aloud a document of considerable length which is brought to him by General Berthier. This, being written at length, is seldom committed to memory. A short time ago, however, the property master at an English theater mislaid the document, and Napoleon, who was new to the part, received instead a blank sheet of paper. For a moment he was aghast; then, eager to escape from his predicament even at the expense of a fellow actor, he handed the paper to General Berthier, saying, "Read it to me."

The other actor was not in the least confused. "Your majesty," he said, handing it back, "I am only a poor soldier of fortune, and you must excuse me. I do not know how to read!"

His Emancipation.

Away back in 1771 Josiah Woodbury of Beverly, Mass., thus published his happy emancipation from matrimonial woes:

Beverly, Sept. 16, 1771.

Ran away from Josiah Woodbury, cooper, his house plague for seven long years, Masury Old Moll, alias Trial of Vengeance. He that lost will never seek her; he that shall keep her I will give two Bushel of Beans. I forewarn all Persons in Town or County from trusting said Trial of Vengeance. I have hove all the old (shoes) I can find for joy, and all my neighbors rejoice with me. A good Riddance of bad Ware. Amen!

FLIGHT OF THE EARTH.

Rushing Through Space at the Rate of a Million Miles a Day.

Our dear old earth, which seems immovable and solid as we go about our daily work or travel over its furrowed surface, is yet spinning and rolling and swaying in complex but orderly motion. Its axial rotation gives us day and night. Its circuit round the sun brings the seasons and the year. The circling of the poles produces the procession of the equinoxes. The planets perturb in its courses. The plane of its orbit sways up and down, and its perihelion is slowly shifted. The moon swings round a center of gravity common to both, while the sun and all our system speed onward to some far distant goal. And, if the bright star in the constellation Taurus is the central point round which this vast orbit sweeps, then Alcyone is the center of the universe for us.

As far as astronomers can judge, this motion through the vast abyss of interstellar space is at the rate of about a million miles a day, and it is in the direction of the constellation Hercules. The motion through space is believed to be away from Argus and toward Hercules. Some have thought that Alcyone in the Pleiades is somewhere near the center of the vast circuit swept over by the sun and his attendant worlds. If this is true, that beautiful star as it silently twinkles in the constellation Taurus becomes of surpassing interest to mankind.—Chicago Tribune.

HE WAS NOT IMMORTAL.

A Test That Proved It Was Possible to Kill a Spaniard.

Early in the sixteenth century the natives of Porto Rico plotted to kill the Spaniards on the island. There was much doubt, however, as to whether or not it was possible to kill a Spaniard. Many of the natives insisted that it was not. Finally it was decided to make an experiment.

A young Spaniard who was passing through an Indian village was hospitably received and fed, and then a number of natives accompanied him on his journey. When he arrived at a river his companions offered to carry him across.

The young man accepted and was taken up by two men and carried into the water on their shoulders. Arriving near the middle of the river, they threw him in and held him down until he ceased to struggle.

Then they carried him ashore with profuse apologies, loudly proclaiming that they stumbled by accident and calling upon him to arise and continue his journey. But the young man did not move, and finally the natives were convinced that he was actually dead.

Having secured the proof they wanted, the leaders of the rebellion at once began a general attack upon the Spaniards.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Unearned Gratitude.

A sample of the late Dr. William Everett's caustic repartee:

"I always experience a sense of deep obligation to you whenever I meet you or hear of you," said George Babbitt to Dr. Everett one morning when they found themselves pacing the deck of an ocean steamer together.

"Why so?" piped the doctor.

"Because," said Mr. Babbitt, "I recall that I was once so fortunate as to win the Boylston prize for oratory at Harvard, and you were chairman of the board of judges."

"I remember it perfectly well," rejoined the brusque doctor. "The judges were five in number. At the conclusion of the speaking we retired to consider the merits of the contestants. It was moved that you be awarded a first prize. On that motion the vote was 3 to 2 in your favor. I was one of the two."—Boston Transcript.

Bleeding by Bowshot.

That all diseases can be cured by bleeding is still firmly believed by several savage tribes and especially by the Papuan negroes. When one of their physicians becomes convinced that it is necessary to bleed a patient he goes several feet in front of him, and then, drawing his bow, he fits a sharp pointed arrow to it and, after careful aim, fires the arrow into the vein which he desires to open. The arrow, it is said, invariably goes straight to the mark, and the thorn or splinter of glass with which it is tipped does the work as successfully as a lancet. Moreover, the patients never show the slightest fear, since they are convinced that from the moment the arrows pierce their veins they will begin to recover.

The Producer.

"It must be annoying to have to ask your husband for money," said the intrusive woman.

"I wouldn't think of doing so," replied Mrs. Cumrox. "We insist on family games of bridge and in that way avoid being under the slightest obligations for what he contributes."—Washington Star.

DON'T COUNT YOUR CHICKS TILL THEY'RE FRIED.

Oh, what a happy thought when on the green
Those little yellow legs are seen!
You look them o'er with anxious eye
And say, "They'll soon be big enough to fry."

The neighbor just across the way
Hears those same words most every day
As you the weight of those chicks try—
"They'll soon be big enough to fry."

The preacher, who knows all fowl facts,
Oft wonders if you're not half cracked,
For every time he passes by
You say, "They'll soon be big enough to fry."

At last when scales are most worn out
And folk are tired of your spout
You look Mariar in the eye
And cry, "I guess they're big enough to fry!"

"Hooray! Tomorrow is the day!
Invite the preacher o'er the way,
My, golly, won't the feathers fly!
Those chicks are bully now to fry."

But, oh, when rose the morrow's sun
And you unto that chick coop run
Instead of chicks so plump and spry
There grinned old skunk, so fat and sly.

And as he threw you a nosegay
That wasn't sweet as new mown hay
That nasty skunk just seemed to say,
"Why didn't you fry 'em yesterday?"

WHY DON'T EGGS HATCH?

Yes, why are so many eggs infertile? Here it is in an eggshell.

Some are so hasty to set eggs they set them before the birds are mated long enough to fertilize them. Then the male bird may have a favorite or be a failure. Roosters wear out with age. It is wise to test the first eggs. If not good you may thus change males, save time and eggs and not skin customers. Your male bird may be half starved through overgallantry to the hens, he may be sick, have too many hens to serve, or you may have too many males for the hens.

You may have overworked your hens for winter eggs; they may be semi-invalids, louse racks or full of disease germs, immature, overfed, underfed or inbred.

Overfat is often the cause of infertiles among chickens, pigeons, turkeys, ducks and geese. But maybe you fed egg dope.

Open a hen that doesn't lay or lays infertiles and note if you haven't scorched or burned out her egg factory and then make a vow between you and the gatepost that you're done giving your hens knockout drops.

JOHNNYCAKE AND BROILER BREAD.

There are those who have lots of time to fuss with their chicks and believe they can just do a little better than the other fellow by cooking and baking for their little roosters.

For these we furnish the following recipes, the first especially for little chicks and the second for broilers. The first is used by many turkey raisers.

JOHNNYCAKE

Cornmeal	1 part
Wheat bran	1 part
Oatmeal	1 part

Season with salt, throw in a handful of chick charcoal, mix with skim, sour or buttermilk and bake well.

BROILER BREAD.

Cornmeal	2 pounds
Bran	2 pounds
Flour mids	1 pound
Beef scrap	½ pound

Mix well, stir in six raw eggs and milk sufficient to moisten and bake in greased pan in slow oven. Always have grit and charcoal handy to chicks. Feed this bread dry and crumbled.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

Cleveland, O., which originated the beef boycott, also organized a "thirty cent egg club." This club decided 30 cents the "natural price" for eggs and refused to pay more. Grandma, with her ten cent eggs, would consider this an awful eggsaggeration.

Seventy-five pairs of wild turkeys turned loose on a state game preserve near Waynesboro, Pa., will be kept chained to the spot by buckwheat sown in the middle of the preserve. Notices will also be posted to keep off all skunks, weasels, foxes and coons.

Turkey raffles will not be so numerous in Harrisburg, Pa., next winter, as all those found guilty of conducting them the past season were fined $50 and costs.

Cleveland, O., while eschewing meat, chewed up the rooster to such an extent that a cock's crow is now a novelty. With no chicken to chew, the preachers will bow an adieu.

The only way to get rid of good thoroughbred roosters is to eat them, sell them at market or advertise them. Advertise them first in your town paper and you'll soon find it's the proper caper.

Thousands of columns of space were used by the newspapers in extolling the American hen and her billion dollar product. As this is free advertising that ought to help every fancier how could they reciprocate better than by sending fresh eggs from their pens to these newspaper men.

When an infertile egg is tested out after being in an incubator three weeks it looks just like a fresh egg except the white is thinner. Such eggs are often sold as "strictly fresh" and are hard to detect too.

A York county (Pa.) poultryman warned a neighbor that if he caught the man's cat on his premises he would kill him. The neighbor dared him. The next night, hearing a disturbance in his pen, he rushed out, and, seeing what he supposed was the neighbor's Tommy, he jumped and came down on him like a thousand of brick, but, oh, "dunder und blitzen," it was a polecat!

Danderine

GROWS HAIR and we can PROVE IT!

A lady from Minnesota writes: "As a result of using Danderine, my hair is close to five feet in length."

Beautiful Hair At Small Cost

HAIR troubles, like many other diseases, have been wrongly diagnosed and altogether misunderstood. The hair itself is not the thing to be treated, for the reason that it is simply a product of the scalp and wholly dependent upon its action. The scalp is the very soil in which the hair is produced, nurtured and grown, and it alone should receive the attention if results are to be expected. It would do no earthly good to treat the stem of a plant with a view of making it grow and become more beautiful—the soil in which the plant grows must be attended to. Therefore, the scalp in which the hair grows must receive the attention if you are to expect it to grow and become more beautiful.

Loss of hair is caused by the scalp drying up, or losing its supply of moisture or nutriment; when baldness occurs the scalp has simply lost all its nourishment, leaving nothing for the hair to feed upon (a plant or even a tree would die under similar conditions.)

The natural thing to do in either case, is to feed and replenish the soil or scalp as the case may be, and your crop will grow and multiply as nature intended it should.

Knowlton's Danderine has a most wonderful effect upon the hair glands and tissues of the scalp. It is the only remedy for the hair ever discovered that is similar to the natural hair foods or liquids of the scalp.

It penetrates the pores quickly and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities.

One 25-cent bottle is enough to convince you of its great worth as a hair growing and hair beautifying remedy—try it and see for yourself.

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

FRUIT TREE PLANTING AT HIGH NOTCH IN COUNTY

Greatest in History, Says State Orchard Inspector Foster.

EXPECTS BIG RESULTS

Predicts, With Continuation of Present Interest in Orchard Culture, Greatly Increased Yields in Fruit in all Parts of County.

That Centre County is experiencing the greatest period of fruit tree planting and orchard culture in its history, is the statement of T. C. Foster, a State orchard inspector, attached to the Department of Agriculture, at Harrisburg. Mr. Foster predicts that with a continuation of the interest being manifested in orchard culture by residents of the county, the near future will witness results far beyond anything heretofore known in this section of the State.

The schedule of public orchard meetings, which was announced in our issue of May 5, to take place at various points in the county, was concluded on Friday, last, in the large commercial orchard of our townsman, Col. W. Fred Reynolds, which is located near Rock. The meetings throughout the County have been well attended, the increasing interest in up-to-date methods of horticulture attracting many from distant parts of the county to make long drives to attend some of the meetings.

Special information was given at the various orchards regarding the preparation of the Bordeaux-Arsenate-of-Lead mixture, the effective spray remedy for control of Codling moth and fungous troubles common to Apple, Pear, and Quince, as also for all chewing insects, known to infest fruit trees. The mixture was made by combining 4 pounds of fresh lime, 1½ pounds copper sulphate, (Bluestone), 2 pounds lead arsenate, and diluting to make 50 gallons. This was given for first spraying after the blossoms fell, and a second spraying will be given for the same purpose in 10 days or two weeks, when 3 pounds copper sulphate, 5 pounds fresh lime and 9 pounds lead arsenate should be used in making 50 gallons.

It is well to advise the dissolving of the Bluestone and lead-arsenate in boiling water in separate stone crocks of 2 gallons capacity. Care should be exercised to not leave any of the poison around. Stir the ingredients well until thoroughly dissolved. Slack the lime and thin like milk before straining into your spray barrel, which should have a quantity of water in before any of the materials are put in. Before starting to spray stir the contents of the barrel well, so that the material when sprayed will be uniform in strength. It should assume a light blue color in the spray barrel at all times. Do not continue spraying a tree after the material commences to drip from the foliage.

It is expected that apples and other fruits thus sprayed will be free from the imperfections so common in the past.

The increased amount of orchard planting in the county this year is evidence that the subject of fruitgrowing is attracting a great many to that branch of agriculture. Inspector Foster, who has been in charge of the work for the Division of Zoology in this county, will resume the work of orchard inspection about June 1, at a point near Linden Hall. All persons are cordially invited to ask questions affecting their fruit trees when he makes his visit.

WITH 3 DAYS ONLY TO LIVE?

What Some of Bellefonte's Citizens Think They Would Do.

On Sunday, last, a reporter of "The Republican" had the good fortune to overhear the conversation of several prominent Bellefonters, the subject being: "What would a man do, if he knew for a certainty that the earth would be smothered by the comet's tail on the following Wednesday?" They all realized then that nothing would happen, but just for the sake of an argument they imagined the impossible and asked every man within hailing distance what he would do with his last three days.

The answers were of a great variety. "The Republican," sensing a most unique question, carried the argument one step farther and put the question to several other gentlemen, from different spheres of life. Listen to a few of the answers:

Dr. J. L. Seibert: "I would accept the inevitable."

Herman Holtz: "Three days, huh, I would demand two weeks notice."

W. C. Heinle: I would consider it all up, then and there. What is the use of fighting against destiny." (No reference to politics.)

James K. Barnhart, cashier of the First National Bank: "I would pray, but I don't want anything printed about it."

Charles R. Kurtz, editor of the Centre Democrat: "I would pay my debts and settle down to enjoy the the rest of my life."

J. C. Rumberger: "I would go down on my knees and pray and pray, and pray. Then I would go crazy with the rest the world."

Col. J. L. Spangler: "I don't take any stock in all your old comets."

SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS MAY 31

Will Be Held in Brick Building, Announces Principal Wagner.

Supervising Principal Jonas E. Wagner announces that an examination for entrance to the Bellefonte High School or the Grades will be held at the Brick Building, on Tuesday, May 31. The announcement follows:

BELLEFONTE, PA.,
May 16, 1910.

TO THE PUBLIC:

An examination for entrance to the Bellefonte High School or the Grades will be held in the Brick Building May 31, 1910, and all those who are seeking admission to our schools for next year are urged to present themselves at that time. Any credentials in the form of late reports will be recognized and may be of material benefit.

The completion of the New High School building, with the consequent reorganization of the courses of study, presents to the young people of this section an opportunity for securing an education of the same standard as that offered in the strongest high schools of the State. In the designing and construction of the building all details affecting beauty, convenience, and sanitary arrangements have been fully embodied and carefully worked out. These facts, when taken in consideration with the additional plans being formulated by the Board of Education to raise the standard of the schools, are sufficient guarantee to the character of the work that will be done; and parents will do well to consider the means afforded for securing a good training for their children at a minimum of cost.

Strong courses will be arranged for those who wish to prepare for college or for teaching, as well as for those who desire to pursue a general course which will fit them to enter the active duties of life in an intelligent manner,

Very truly yours,
JONAS E. WAGNER,
Supervising Principal.

Howard Spangler's Home Burned.

The home of Howard Spangler, on East Bishop Street, was totally destroyed by fire late Tuesday afternoon. It is supposed that the fire was caused by a defective flue. A high wind was blowing at the time and the houses of Edward J. Gehret and W. W. Bible, adjoining the Spangler home, caught fire but both were saved. The Bible house was more or less damaged by water. Just about the time the alarm was turned in for the Spangler fire the firemen were summoned to a small blaze at Christ Beezer's livery stable, in the rear of Joseph's store, and for a few minutes it was reported that the store was on fire. Some of the firemen, in responding to the call for the Spangler fire, made a flying dash to the home of Colonel J. L. Spangler, only to find on their arrival there that the blaze was in another part of town. Howard Spangler was down town at the time his house was burning. Several friends who met him on the street inquirer the extent of his loss, which was the first that he knew his home had been destroyed.

Happily Married.

On Tuesday morning, at St. John's Reformed church parsonage, Harry P. Thompson, of Bellefonte, and Bessie E. Loner, of Stormstown, were united in holy wedlock by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Ambrose M. Schmidt. Mr. Thompson is a splendid young man and his bride is in every way qualified to grace her new home.
